EPISODE 1

James Purefoy, Matthew Goode and Matthew Rhys return for a third season of The Wine Show and this time there's a new member of the team – Dominic West. He joins James at the season's headquarters at Quinta do Noval in the stunning Douro Valley in Portugal. Matthew Goode and James Purefoy are on the Portuguese Road Trip adventure of a lifetime, starting in Lisbon where they discover the surprising culinary link between Portugal and India thanks to the Portuguese Age of the Discoveries.

Matthew Rhys is taking Joe to lunch in New York, to pair wine with varied international cuisines which together represent NYC's ethnic diversity.

At Jewish appetiser restaurant Russ & Daughters, they share board of smoked fish and breads. Joe Fattorini and Amelia Singer are challenged to create and lead a Wine Tour on the Island of Madeira with just one day to research and prep before their guests arrive. Do they sink or swim?

EPISODE 2

Matthew Goode & James Purefoy think they've got their second road trip challenge sorted when asked to find a wine that links Portugal and England. But there's a surprise in store. Beginning with a privileged romp around Porto's little secret - The British Factory House, their mission takes them high up into the Douro Valley to meet its next generation of winemakers. In New York, it's tacos in a truck, as Matthew Rhys and Joe Fattorini lunch with some Mexican wine at Zona Rosa.

In the Alentejo Matthew Rhys and James Purefoy must find a wine that relates to modern day space travel. They witness the extraordinary event that is the annual cork harvest, and a wine which makes James cry. In New York, Matthew Rhys takes Joe Fattorini for dim sum and noodles with Chinese wine.

At the HQ in Douro Valley Dominic West and James have their mouths set on fire by Nam Prik and put it out with wines brought by Joe Fattorini, who has been challenged by Thai food expert, Kay Plunkett-Hogge to devise a wine list for her upcoming pop up restaurant in London. He begins his introduction to Thai ingredients and flavours in Bangkok followed by a visit to Thailand's Monsoon Valley Vineyard. Elephants in the vineyard? That's a first for The Wine Show.

EPISODE 4

This show's road trip sees James Purefoy and Matthew Goode search for a link between Scandinavia and Portugal. It takes them to the 'Venice' of Portugal, Aveiro. There they take a boat trip to find out about the town's history and meet the Confraria do Bacalhau, a brotherhood dedicated to the preservation of all things cod. Wines are supplied by the legendary winemaker Luis Pato.

Stateside, Matthew Rhys and Joe Fattorini explore the influence of the Irish on New York City at Molly's Shibeen on the lower east side of Manhattan. Lamb stew and a bottle of claret made by the last of the Irish refugees to flee to Bordeaux in the 18th Century.

Dominic West joins James for some bubbles at the HQ in Douro Valley, as Joe and Amelia explore the history of sparkling wine, particularly Champagne, and uncover an uncomfortable truth – that is was first made by the English.

EPISODE 5

Matthew Goode and James Purefoy are sent to Braga, the capital of the Vinho Verde wine region in northern Portugal. Matthew climbs the 300 steps to the Bom Jesus church, repenting his sins along the way. They learn about how wine making was integral to the monasteries of the country and taste the glorious wines of the region in the shadow of one of the oldest and most beautiful churches in the area. Matthew Rhys has a short walk home after dinner with Joe at his local Italian restaurant in Brooklyn – Noodle Pudding where they have gnocchi, Osso Bucco and an Italian white wine made by Joe Bastianich. Dominic West recounts fond memories of sweet German wine as a teenager, as Joe Fattorini heads to the Rheingau in Germany to find out where it all went wrong for German wine, how it went from being the most expensive in the world to one with a terrible reputation and how it's definitely a country worth looking at again. Along the way he meets Queen Victoria's 4 x great grandson and how Victoria was the Kim Kardashian of her day.

EPISODE 6

Joe Fattorini tells Matthew and James about Dona Antonia Ferreira, the most famous woman in Portuguese wine in the 19th Century. He then sends them to meet a modern day businesswoman in the Douro, Sophia Bergqvist where they have a beer as well as wine at the stunning Quinta de la Rosa.

Dominic West and James enjoy some wines they can't believe are made in the city, while Amelia Singer meets a skateboarding wine maker in Santa Rosa, a Capitol Records mogul turned winemaker in Napa and takes part in a Hip Hop and Wine Podcast in New York, all with legendary sommelier André Mack.
